European Nationalism ... Is the way forward

As Europe lurches from crisis to crisis, we were encouraged by the recent visit to London by MPs and MEPs from the Flemish Nationalist Party, Vlaams Belang. Although invited by the BNP to view the damage caused by the recent rioting, the statement issued by VB Chairman, Filip Dewinter, could equally apply to mass immigration and the financial crisis we are all facing in Europe. "There is a better way! Nationalists all over Europe offer a realistic answer to the problems created by the liberal elite. ... We Nationalists need to work together to warn our people what lies ahead and to build even more effective alternatives to the politicians whose policies created this disaster"...

And we totally agree.

Identity Crisis

White kids on most inner-city estates are facing an identity crisis. Born white, they view black gang culture as an aspiration. They imitate black "gangstas" in dress, language and behaviour. There seems to be no white mentors available to help, and the authorities ignore the problem because they don't view it as a problem. We have a "lost generation" and nobody knows what to do.

Chickens come home to roost ...

In previous issues we warned against the US and British government's open support for regime change in parts of the Middle-East, particularly Egypt. We warned that they would regret supporting "people power" and the overthrow of the pro-Israeli President Mubarek. Now with regime change completed, "people power" has seen the people attacking and wrecking the Israeli embassy in Cairo, and relations between Egypt and Israel deteriorate daily and the US and Britain are powerless to condemn the "revolution" they supported.

Many White Kids Want to be BLACK!

The respected historian, Dr David Starkey certainly upset those who promote the message that "multi-culturalism is good for society" when he claimed on primetime television that "white youths involved in the recent riots were imitating black gang culture". Unfortunately, he didn't go the whole way and tell the television audience that white kids have been brainwashed into believing "Black is Best" for many years.

Of course, not all Black kids are bad influences, and not all white kids want to imitate Black gang culture, but in many inner city council estates Black teenagers are the majority and White kids have no local "champions". Anybody who watched the aftermath of the riots could not have failed to notice that almost all "Community leaders" or "Community Youth workers" were black!

The brainwashing began through music and dance such as "Hip-Hop" and "break-dancing". This originated in the black community in New York and swiftly became part of modern black culture in Britain. "Hip-Hop" musicians became icons amongst black teenagers, who also adopted the US-led fashion. In many urban areas young whites followed.

Distinctive "Hip-Hop" Fashion. Now Prevalent Amongst Youth in Our Inner-Cities

Hip-Hop was followed by "rap". To the older generation a confusing form of music using lyrics that rhymed. "Rapping" became the latest trend on the urban council estates. Many teenagers, black and white started wearing massive amounts of fake gold jewellery (bling) with their tank-tops and hoodies. "Hip-Hop" and "Rap" brought a disturbing element into music, with lyrics that denigrated women as "bitches" and "Hoes" (whores). Obscene language such as "motherfs" featured in many songs, drug use was promoted and violence encouraged. The police, ever eager to prosecute white musicians for "racist" language ignored rap and its threats. One of the early influences to this culture was a singer called Biggie Smalls, also known as "Notorious BIG"

Biggie Smalls was born in Brooklyn, New York. A small-time crack cocaine dealer, he became a millionaire through his foul mouthed and violent music. A member of the notorious "Bloods" gang his recordings praised violence and the killing of members of other gangs. "Gangsta-rap" was born.

Sadly for Biggie, he was shot dead in a "drive-by" shooting aged just 25.

As drugs became endemic in our inner-cities, gangs were formed to protect the lucrative drug trade. Young whites, normally well outnumbered by young blacks on the estates join for self-protection and a share of the proceeds. Desperate to be accepted by the black "gangstas" white teenagers have done their utmost to imitate their black mentors. Talk to any white kid, girl or boy on an inner-city estate, and you will find they speak with a strange, false Jamaican patois, where "ask" is pronounced "axed" and the conversation is littered with the word "innit". This is our "lost" generation. As David Starkey said, " A particular sort of violent, destructive and nihilistic gangster culture has become the fashion", and sadly, the authorities don't have the know-how, or the will to stop it!

 The author has just retired after a 30 year career as a social worker in South London.

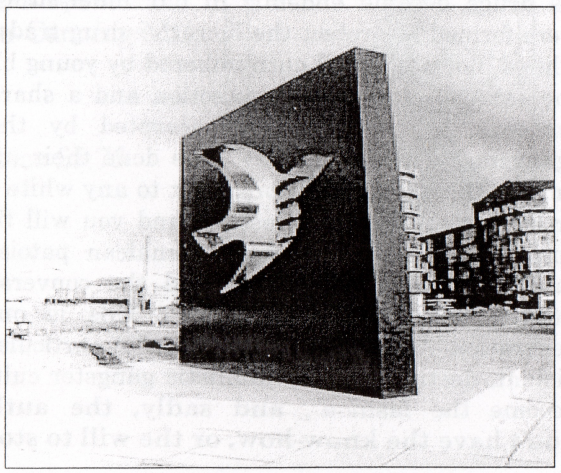

NEWS AROUND BRITAIN

Foreigners Cost NHS £35 Million

Foreigners using Britain's National Health Service and then not paying their bills, has cost the NHS over £35 million in the past eight years. Just last year alone, the NHS was forced to write off treatment costs of £7 million after failing to recover the money from foreign patients. Non urgent treatment for foreign patients is not supposed to go ahead unless the patients pay in advance but thousands are arriving as visitors to Britain with pre-known medical conditions who then go to hospital as emergency patients. They then leave after recovery and return home without paying their bills.

Vandals Desecrate Blitz Memorial

A war memorial erected to honour civilians killed in the London Blitz has had to have a protective fence put around it to stop vandals desecrating it by spraying graffiti over it. The memorial, sits in a specially created park overlooking the River Thames at Wapping. Unfortunately, the area is now home to the highest density of Asians in the country, and Asian names and gang slogans have featured regularly amongst the graffiti along with sinister threatening slogans such as "kill the Brits".
29,000 Londoners were killed in the Blitz.

25,000 British Pensioners Die of Cold as Foreign Owned Energy Companies Increase Prices

As energy companies impose massive price increases on gas and electricity it has been revealed that nine pensioners died of cold every hour during the worst of our winter weather between December and March last year. A total of 25,000 British pensioners died of cold related illnesses in the four month period. It has been estimated that the recent energy price increases will put 100,000 British pensioners into fuel poverty and at risk.
Most of the energy companies supplying retain are now foreign owned.

EDL London March Banned

A march through the East London area of Whitechapel by the English Defence League has been banned by the Home Secretary following a request by police and Tower Hamlets council. The ban covers five London boroughs including Tower Hamlets, and will apply from the 2nd of September for a period of 30 days. A counter-protest march planned by the extreme-left UAF will also be banned.

The EDL announced that if their march was banned they would consider holding a static protest in the area under the "Right of Assembly" which the local police chief has admitted would be difficult to ban and even more difficult to police.

EDL: Whitechapel Bound?

Left-wing Groups Plan to Commemorate the Anniversary of "Battle that Never Was"

The left-wing group, Cable Street 75, plans to hold a "Cable Street anniversary weekend" to commemorate the "Battle of Cable Street" which took place on the 4th of October 1936.

Cable Street 75, is backed by amongst others, the Communist Party of Britain, and the Young Communist League. Many of the activities planned for the anniversary weekend will take place in the historic Wilton's Music Hall. That this venue, a registered charity which hopes for funding from the National Lottery Heritage fund, is facilitating political events is surprising, as the Heritage fund could continue to deny funding if complaints were made to it about Wilton's apparent political involvement.

The Home Secretary's 30 day Ban on Marches Could Stop this March

The Cable Street 75s anniversary march, planned for Sunday the 2nd of October could be banned as it would fall within the area and the timeframe of the ban imposed on the EDL march by the Home Secretary.

RIOT

BRITAIN'S CITIES BURN

"Broken Britain" finally exploded into a week of violence and looting not seen on such a wide scale in this country before. Labour politicians blamed poverty, budget cuts and even the increase in student fees, and many nationalists claimed they were race riots ...But they were wrong! The riots were symptomatic of "Broken Britain", and could happen again!

Initially, most of the media claimed the rioters were anarchists, but as the riots developed into mass lootings it became obvious there was no political motivation behind the violence.

The rioting began in Tottenham, North London, following a protest over the shooting by police of a well known black gangster. There was an element of race behind the early riots, where black youths seemed to be predominant, but in Tottenham, Enfield, Croydon and Hackney, blacks make up the majority of the youth population. Certainly there were attacks on whites by blacks, the man charged over the death of 68 year-old white pensioner, Richard Mannington-Bowes is black, and there were many other cases of whites being targeted by black youths.

Black Youth Steals Clothes from Young White

But then again, the widely televised incident of a student being robbed by his "helpers", the student was Malaysian, and the thug charged was white!

As the riots and looting spread to other parts of the country it became even more evident that criminality and not race, was behind the violence. In Manchester, city centre CCTV footage clearly shows the majority of rioters and looters were white. No, these were NOT race riots!

Immediately following the initial riot in Tottenham, the rioting was transformed into looting. When scenes of looting were widely broadcast on the media copy-cat actions took place. The police were caught by surprise and did not have sufficient resources, or the will to crush the riots, before they took hold. Fortunately, extra police, a more determined attitude and stiffer sentencing by our courts seems to have quelled the problem for NOW!

But, while we have immigrants taking our jobs we will have an underclass that lives on benefits and crime. An underclass that with their confusion over racial identity, their gang culture, and ghetto mentality, future riots are almost guaranteed.

We must stop further immigration into Britain, deport all immigrant criminals, set aside jobs exclusively for Britons and take our country back from the underclass. There should be no political restrictions on "stop and search" and a zero tolerance policy on Class A drugs.

Those who take part in riots and looting should face mandatory jail sentences. The left and the liberals will say this could provoke an even more hostile reaction from the underclass, but "Let them Hate ... as long as they Fear" should be the motto of the police.

Also the decent people in communities must not be afraid of defending them. An excellent example of this was the street patrols initiated by residents of Enfield. Calling themselves the "Whiteshirts" a large group took to patrolling their own areas and successfully deterred any further rioting or looting.

We have the right and a duty to defend our communities and our country, let's make sure we do it!

Germany

Harassment of Nationalists Continues

The German government have announced they are considering taking the children of those they believe are "Neo-Nazis" into social services care, and may eventually send the children to foster homes in a bid to stop children being "brainwashed" by their parents.

It would seem that the government are terrified that young children would be indoctrinated by their parent's political views and become the "Neo-Nazis" of the future. Their concern is reinforced by the increasing numbers of summer camps being established where outdoor activities like horse-riding and swimming are supplemented with subjects such as the history of the Third Reich, German identity and culture and racial differences. Unnamed government officials claim that "several thousand households in Germany are now raising their children to admire the Nazis"

A spokesman for the "Volk und Vaterland" summer camps project told League Sentinel, "These government proposals to take our children is more in line with Communist North Korea than a supposedly democratic Germany. The summer camps are less political than the "Madras's" run by Muslim groups to educate their children about Islam, and the German government has no problem with them".

Germany Has a History of Summer Youth Camps

In 2009, the government banned the nationalist youth group, Heimattreue Deutsche Jugend (HDJ) for organising summer camps for 8-14 year-olds. A police raid on one camp led to an official report stating, "There was a regimented camp routine complete with flag hoisting similar to the behaviour in the times of National Socialism". To the paranoid German authorities, camping outdoors, raising a national flag and sometimes singing around an evening bonfire were all symbols of Neo-Nazi revival! The HDJ, (pictured right) which had several hundred members refuted the accusations claiming they were simply "a youth group for environment, community and homeland". Despite their protestations they were banned.

But now the authorities claim that the HDJ continues to organise summer camps for families, and a new witch-hunt begins!

Another worry to the increasingly paranoid German government is the claim that nationalist families are moving home to live closer to other nationalists thus creating a "nationalist blok". Anti-Fascists claim that a prime example of this practice is the village of Jamal, Mecklenburg, where it is claimed, 99% of the villagers are active Nazi sympathisers.

Unfortunately, there are only ten houses and twenty-eight adults in the village, not exactly a "Nazi revolution".

Look Back at History

Fascism in Britain: (Part 2)

THE BRITISH FASCISTI

Most Britons assume that Sir Oswald Mosley's British Union of Fascists was Britain's first Fascist party, but its formation in 1932 had already been preceded some nine years earlier when in 1923 a remarkable woman, Rotha Lintorn-Orman, formed the British Fascisti.

Rotha Lintorn-Orman was indeed a remarkable woman. Born in 1895, Rotha had a British army Major as a father, and a Field Marshall as a grandfather. So it came as no surprise to her family when on the outbreak of World War One, in 1914, Rotha joined the army medical corps as an ambulance driver. She saw action on several fronts and was twice awarded medals for bravery. In 1917 she was invalided back to Britain and took up a post with the newly formed Motor Transport Corps training ambulance drivers until the end of the war.

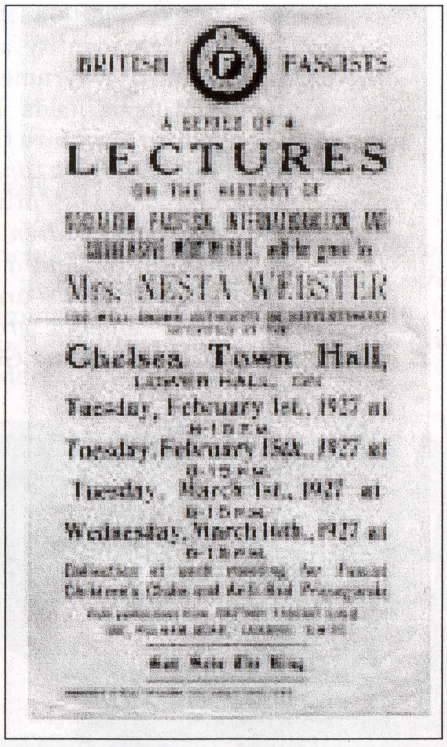

Rotha Lintorn-Orman

Returning to her genteel way of life in Somerset, it can be assumed that no more would have been heard from Rotha, but world events were changing lives and destinies. The Communists were growing force in many parts of Europe, but a young Italian man was about to rock the world. The man was Benito Mussolini, and as he marched his Black-shirted Fascists into Rome and into power, Rotha was transfixed.

Just a few months after Mussolini's amazing victory, Rotha put an advertisement in The Patriot magazine seeking "Anti-Communists". To her surprise and delight, within weeks over 20,000 anti-Communists had replied, and the British Fascisti was formed.

Rotha was convinced that British Communists would attempt to mount a revolution and the British Fascisti would not oppose them politically, but physically. A highly trained, disciplined force of men and women dedicated to opposing the forthcoming Communist uprising was needed. In a Britain where women took almost no part in politics, the British Fascisti membership was mainly women. But the role of women in the movement was equal to that of men; they were definitely not the weaker sex! Physical training, self-defence techniques such as Judo and Ju-Jitsu and military training courses were undertaken by all members, men and women. The party was organised into political and paramilitary wings and stood candidates in local elections, winning two council seats. The uniformed paramilitary wing also had its own intelligence section, commanded by a young man named Maxwell Knight.

FASCISM in BRITAIN

Other members who later rose to political prominence were author, Nesta Webster, Arnold Leese who later formed his own Imperial Fascist League and William Joyce. At its peak the British Fascisti boasted of having 800 commands with 200 to 500 members in each command. The commands undertook street patrols and during the communist-organised General Strike of 1926 the British Fascisti, both men and women often fought running battles with the Reds.

But it was not the Reds that eventually brought down the British Fascisti, it was the curse of British nationalism that still exists today, internal strife. Smears about Rotha's sexuality were made, not helped by her short manly hairstyle and constantly wearing her military-styled uniform. Also much was made of the fact that she never married. Many leading male members were not happy in a party led and dominated by women.

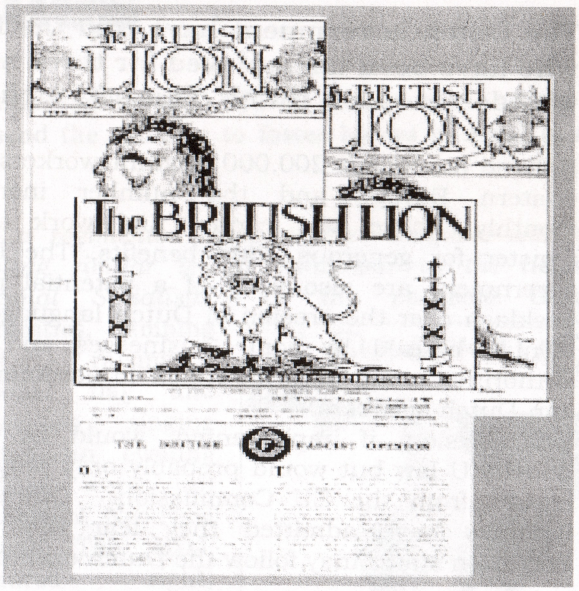

Many leading male members were not happy in a party led and dominated by women

Arnold Leese left to form his own Fascist party in 1928 and Joyce left with the charismatic Neil Francis Hawkins to join Mosley's newly formed British Union of Fascists in 1932. Faced with what she saw as massive betrayal by the very people she tried to save from a Communist takeover, Rotha began to suffer from depression. Rumours at the time suggest she turned to drugs and alcohol. Within three years she was dead, aged just 40. Mosley and the BUF became the champions of Fascism until the beginning of the war in 1939.

Dutch Plan to Deport Jobless Migrants

The Dutch government have told the European Commission they plan to deport migrants who have been unemployed for three months and to stop state security benefits to migrants who do not speak Dutch. This will include migrants from other EU countries!

Holland has about 200,000 migrant workers from Eastern Europe and the number increases monthly. Those who cannot find work simply register for generous state benefits. The Dutch government are also wary of a potential public backlash over the erosion of Dutch language and identity caused by some businesses and local authorities using signs in Polish to accommodate non-Dutch speakers.

The decision, if implemented, would be illegal under EU law but would probably only provoke a rebuke from the EU Commission. Officials in Brussels have admitted they fear that other European states may follow the Dutch example.

Hungary

War Crime Suspect Acquitted

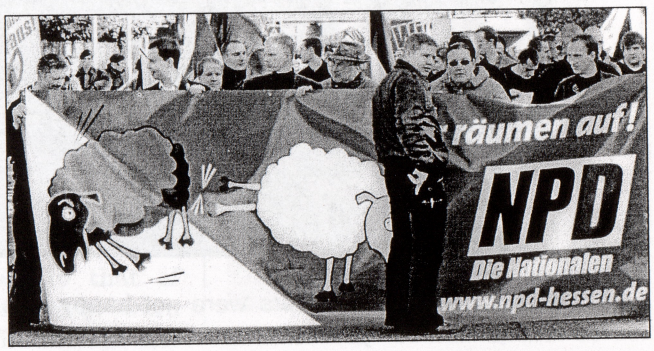

Sandor Kepiro, a 97 year-old former police officer has been acquitted of war crimes charges. The charges related to actions taken by Hungarian forces in Novi Sad, now part of Serbia, in 1942. It was alleged that Mr Kepiro, then a Captain in the Hungarian police, ordered the execution of 36 Serbian Jews. The three-Judge tribunal sitting in the Hungarian Supreme Court in Belgrade ruled that prosecution evidence, much of it being statements obtained by the pre-war Communist regime was "unsafe".

Mr Kepiro fled Hungary after the Communist occupation in 1945 and lived in Argentina until his return in 1996. The charges against him were supported by the Simon Wiesenthal Centre.

Germany

Socialists Call for Ban on NPD

The German Socialist Party (SPD) have called on the government to ban the Nationaldemokratische Partei Deutschlands (NPD) following attempts to smear the party with allegations of links to the Norwegian murderer, Anders Breivik.

Despite being exonerated of any links with the Norwegian killer, the NPD, it is claimed, produces "hate propaganda that could lead to vulnerable Germans being coerced into copycat killings". The call for the ban is unlikely to be successful following a previous unsuccessful attempt to ban the party in 2003.

Then, the Federal Constitutional Court ruled that the NPD were "a legal party pursuing legal political policies".

Flemish MPs Visit Riot Torn London

A group of MPs and MEPs from the Flemish Nationalist party, Vlaams Belang had a two-day visit to London to view the key places where the riots took place.

The Flemish parliamentarians were invited by the British National Party Chairman, Nick Griffin, himself an MEP. The BNP's London Regional Organiser, Steve Squire took the Flemish visitors on a day long guided tour of our riot-torn Capital including Tottenham and Hackney where some of the worst of the rioting took place. The visitors were clearly shocked at the scale of the wanton destruction. The delegation was led by the Chairman of Vlaams Belang, Filip Dewinter, who is a Senator in the Flemish Parliament.

Shocked by the Riot Damage: Filip Dewinter

After the visit Mr Dewinter issued the following statement. "There is a better way! Nationalists all over Europe offer a realistic answer to the problems created by the liberal elite. The spectre of ethnic violence is knocking on the gates of Europe, and what happened in London last week could all to easily happen in many other countries. We nationalists need to work together to warn our people what lies ahead and to build even more effective alternatives to the politicians whose policies created this disaster".

BOOK REVIEW

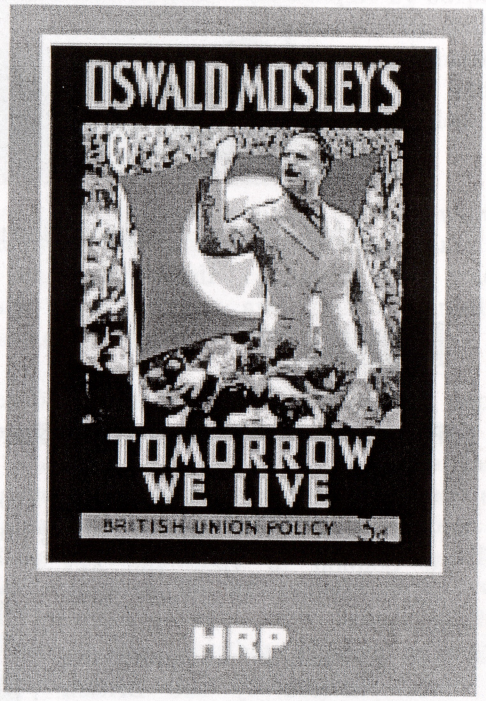

TOMORROW WE LIVE

by Sir Oswald Mosley

Born in 1896, Sir Oswald Mosley has been described as a man who could have been the British Prime Minister. However, he regarded the system of Government as being deeply flawed in the sense that it was just a talking shop in which nothing serious could ever be done. While Parliament talked, amended, argued and delayed, real power rested elsewhere. By that he meant with the great financial interests which really dictated any course of events. His answer was a British variety of fascism.

This is an attractive new printing of Mosley's most important pre-war publication. It outlines the reasons why Britain should adopt the Fascist ideal with chapters on many aspects of our national life. From economics to free speech, from the Jewish question to foreign policy.

All the old assumptions and myths are hereby overturned in a clear and easy to read truthful explanation of why, how and what needed to be done. The book has 94 pages

75 Years Later..
CABLE STREET .. THE FACTS!

This October will mark the 75th Anniversary of perhaps the biggest myth ever produced by the British left, the myth of, "The Battle of Cable Street."

Since it's formation in 1932 the British Union of Fascists (BUF) most successful political tactic was the holding of propaganda marches, complete with flags and drums and street meetings. In this way the public got to hear first hand from Mosley and other speakers, the true message of BUF rather than the hostile spin used by some national newspapers. Remember, in those days before television most Britons received news via the radio, if they could afford one, or through the newspapers.

On October 4th 1936, Mosley planned to hold four street meetings at different locations in East London, preceded by a propaganda march from venue to venue.The four venues were Aske Street, Shoreditch, Chester Street, Bethnal Green, Stafford Row, Bow and Salmon Lane, Limehouse. As you can see, no meetings were planned in Cable Street, which is in Stepney!

The BUF assembly point was in Royal Mint Street, from where they planned to march up Dock Street, into Leman Street and then on to Shoreditch. The march never planned to go down Cable Street!

No March, No Meetings Were Planned for Cable Street

Mosley's communist opponents planned to do what they could to disrupt the BUF's plans and brought in activists from as far away as Birmingham. Given faulty intelligence they began to erect barricades in Cable Street, thinking this was part of the BUF route. The police responded by taking down the barricades and were set upon by mobs of stone throwing communists. The "Battle" had begun!

When Mosley and the BUF arrived at Royal Mint Street the battle between communist rioters and police had been going for some hours.

Communist Rioter Arrested in Cable Street

Fearing a new wave of violence, this time between Fascists and Communists with his police stuck in between, the Police Commissioner banned the BUF from marching. Mosley, ever law abiding, simply marched west to the embankment instead of East to Shoreditch.

There was no "Battle" between Fascists and Communists at Cable Street. It is a myth. The only confrontation that day was between the reds and the police, something which continues even to this day!
